EXPLOSION KILLS MILL ENGINEER

William E. Wiggins Meets a Tragic Death.

CYLINDER HEAD BLOWS OUT

Small Son of Frank Morgan, Manager of Morgan Lumber Company's Plant, Where Accident Occurred, Narrowly Escaped Death.

A Jacksonville, Fla., dispatch says William H. Wiggins, 26 years old, was mortally wounded when the cylinder head of the engine blew out at the Morgan mill, on the banks of McGirts creek, near Ortega, and died five hours later at St. Luke's hospital.

Wiggins had been employed as engineer by the Morgan Lumber Company for some time, and lived with his wife in a house near the company's mill. At the time of the accident he was alone in the engine room, with the exception of a small son of Frank Morgan, manager of the mill. The boy had a remarkable escape from death, but was uninjured. He was stunned by the explosion, but ran out of the engine room as other workmen rushed to the aid of Wiggins.

Quarter of a Million to be Spent in

Improvements. George W. Saxon, president of the Capital City Bank, one of Tallahassee's financial institutions, has re turned from a business visit to Apalachicola, where he had been to close the sale of Short & Healy, real estate men of this city, of the property known as St. George's Island. The purchasers are wealthy Atlanta people, and they propose to make this the createst resort on the southern coast. Over a quarter of a million dollars will be spent at once in the erection of hotels and club house, and other wise beautifying the property. No gambling or liquor selling will be allowed. Each member of he club will be a stockholder, receiving one share, which will be forfelted to the club in case his conduct is other than what it should be. Mr. Saxon says that a great deal of interest is being taken in this section of the state, and he looks for other enterprises and investments to follow this one.

Because he was deaf and had difficulty in understanding the orders given him, Philip Stewart, a negro lock hand employed on the Jewett coal dock, foot of Ocean street jumped into the St. Johns river at Jacksonville, and drowned before help could reach him. Despondent because of his deafness, Stewart said to other dock hands just before "I'll cure he jumped into the river: my deafness."
